WHEELING, W. VA., JANUARY 29, 1887

Possibly it is true that the desire to drive the Democratic House into agreeing to the building of a navy had something to do with the bellicose character of the speeches in the Senate on the Edmunds resolution. It is not creditable to the Democratic party that such a resort should be necessary. There is not a man of any party who is not well aware of the sham insufficiency of the establishmen which is by courtesy called a navy.

It is, moreover, a world-wide scanda that there are third-rate powers that could wipe off the waters all that stands as an spolegy for an American navy. To make a bad situation werse, our almost inter minable coast line is without defense that would be of service against the power ful navy of Italy, Chili, Japan or China to say nothing of the navy of any one o the first class powers.

Argument has been piled on argument and entreaty on entreaty. The people are overwhelmingly in favor of building a navy. Still the Democratic majority stands in the way. While the National Admin istration was in the hands of the Republican party Democrats in Congress pretend ed to fear that the work, if ordered, would not be honestly done. Every demand to give the country a chance to protect itself was met with a fraud cry-and some states man of the party of Jefferson and Jack son was ready to advance with the spectre of John Roach.

Now the Democratic party has a chance to test its own honesty in the discharge of a great duty; and poor old John Roach broken on the wheel of sham Democratic economy, is in his grave. Is there anything now in the way of building a navy

We are not likely to need a navy to set tle the Canadian fliheries dispute, nor is i probable that we could build one in time the the Canadian fitheries dispute, nor is it probable that we could build one in time to be of use in a war for the settlement of that question. But all the same we need a navy, and the country is last getting into a state of mind to make it hot for the party that stands in the way.

Primary Elections.

They do some things pretty well in Pennsylvania. For example, the law of that Commonwealth recognizes that there are such things as primary electione, and undertakes to regulate them. Ustil a comparatively recent date Pennsylvania was on the bad level of most other States in this regard. She had great need of a change, but it seemed that the men who change, but it seemed that the men who profited by the then existing state of affairs were too strongly intrenched to be dislodged from a position of great vantage gign substance and waste. Section 5 requires such concerns, upon application, to lay pipe to any well where oil has been to lay pipe to any well where oil has been long, and to receive, transport, store or deliver such oil. Section of describes the manner of making general average assessments. Section 7 provides penalty for the violation of any of the provisions of the act of not less than $2,000 nor more more than $2,000 into for the first oflense, and of not less than $2,000 nor more than $5,000 fine, and imprisonment for not less than exity days nor more than one year for any subsequent oflense. Section 8 provides that the act shall not interfere with any contracts now existing. Much had been said in the press and sowhere about the need of a great reform in primary elections, and said generally in a tone of hopelessness. Suddenly the Legislature passed an excellent bill which has not indeed made everybody honest nor resulted in the absolute fairness of primary elections, but this much has been gained—the law brings the peni-has been gained—the law brings the penitentiary very near to the primary election, and once in a while some too-earnest patriot pays the penalty of his zeal without discretion.

A case in point is at hand. A person who attempted to have his friend nominated at all hazards, and resorted to bribery to accomplish that result, has just been convicted in Lackawanna county, and convicted of bribery. This patriot is a Republican, for which reason we are the more rejoiced to know that he shave much closer than justic demands.

patriot is a Republicau, for which reason we are the more rejoiced to know that he is to have time for reflection.

Every State should throw its protecting arms around the primary election. It is here that government really begins—and often ends. Where, as is often the ease, a nomination is equivalent to an election; bribery at the primary enables the aspirant to enter office through corrupt means.

The patroleum industry is languishing under the impositions of this tax, and some such remedy as the one proposed figure if necessary, but the other items allow still of a fair margin of profit to the carrying company. A hot fight is extended in the means of telling at this stage which party holds the upper hand. It went to the Judiciary General Committee this afternoon, and will be reported to the House to-morrow as committed and put upon its passage.

each party an opportunity to vin-dicate its own dignity and integrity of purpose, and to both or all a chance to weed out before coming to the polls in their other and final capacity of the whole body of the people. But the primary ought to be protected as the general election is sought to be protected; and the results should be as great and as good in the ene case as in the other.

Her Majesty and Ireland.

The Queen, in her speech at the opening of Parliament says something about Ireland. From that something it would scarcely be thought that Ireland is in a state of ferment which disturbs the peace of the Empire. Who would suppose that any number of the Irish people are perishing from hunger and cold? It is evident from the royal speech that something is wrong, but the uninformed would never guess from the speech what it is. The most that can be inferred is that some tenants are behaving badly and that the Government requires more law to deal with them.

Queen Victoria is not an unfeeling woman assoverigns go. It is simply her misfortune that she is unable to sympa thize with misery so extreme that her royal mind cannot grasp it. Herself surrounded with an excessive luxury, she is unable to appreciate what it is to be miser able beyond expression. When Her Majesty hears of evictions she cannot quite understand that the thing called eviction differs greatly and in any important feature from a transfer of residence from Windsor Castle to Osbourno House. A ruler sprung from the people would have some point of contact with the people-would have some more lively conceptions of that suffering which is intense and hopeless, and which seems to be the portion of the subjects of the Czar of Russie and of the Irish subjects of the Queen of dressed people variously estimated at from 800 to 1,200 in number. Having obtained admission, the self-invited appear to have behaved in an appallingly vulgar fashion. The Star says that the "dining room was thrown open at 11 o'clock and there was a wild and disgusting acramble for position. Women stood two deep beside the wall, and une arrungled three deep at the table to secure refreahments for them, as though food had not been tasted for days before. Though the raid upon the refreshment rooms was so heavy at times as temporarily to sweep the tables, still the supply was so ample that it required only a few minutes to replenish. At 2:30 A. M. fresh and warm tarrapin stow, with salada and cream and champagne, was handed out." According to the report of the Critic. the scene was not less effensive to all persons of decent breeding. "In the supper room, where a hot meal of everything substantial and dainty was served with champaigne and punch, there was the same hungry rush for food, which is disgusting genteel people here, and which must certainly be considered one of the American traits by the diplomats in Wastington who entertain. The same scences that occurred at the Japanese Legation Monday night were repeated. Well dressed men and women pushed, josticd, and nearly dragged the clothes off one another in a mad rush for the refreshment table, and the supply, which was amply sufficient for the needs of all the guests, had most of them displayed common good breeding, was exhausted nearly among the famine stricken, who bore down in full force on the corps of waiters, and, bracing themselves up against convenient door jambs, went through the menu with numerous encores and a generous washing down of punch and champagne. As particular as the Minister and his secretaries were in the choice of their company, it was pretty generally concluded last night that another consideration might be added with the necessary social position in

THE GREAT AMERICAN HOU.

He attends the Chinese Minister's Ball at Washington.

Washington Dispatch.

The Chinese Minister, Chang Yen Hoon, invited 400 persons to a ball which was held at the legation last night. To his utter amazement and to the astonishment of a great number of the invited guests the house was invaded by a crowd of well dressed people variously estimated at from 800 to 1,200 in number. Having obtained admission, the self-invited appear to have behaved in an appallingly vulgar fashion. The Star says that the "dining room was thrown open at 11 o'clock and there was a wild and disguasting scramble for position. Women stood two deep beside the wall, and men struggled three deep at the table to secure refreahments for them, as though food had not been tasted for days before. Though the raid upon the ordenhand is comes was so heavy at times as temporarily to sweep the tables, still the supply was so ample that it required only a key. and wash the silver three or four times; then melt and roll outfor anode. It will be seen that great care is required in stripping gold or silver, because if the article is kept in the solutions a moment after the gold or silver is stripped, the solutions become deteriorated with the base metal below; but of course this can easily be rectified by refining in the ordinary way if a chemically pure anode of gold and silver is wanted. The question as to whether a dynam or a battery is best for plating cannot be definitely answered. It really depends on circumstances. Operations on a large scale are mostly performed with the dynamo; but the battery does equally as well if powerful enough for the work on hand.
